

Richard Hunter's Huntersounds RP350 Patch Set V16

The patches in this set were designed using the Audix Fireball V mic.
 Many of our customers use different mics and love what they hear.
 Use whatever mic you like! Just keep in mind that the patches will sound different with different mics, just as a "real" amp would.

Note 1 The general layout of patches in this set is:

- > 35 patches in 6 main categories: Amped Blues and Rock, Clean, DI and no amp, Pitch FX, Rotary and Vibrato, and Wah
- > With rare exceptions, the patches are ordered by category, e.g all the Amped Blues and Rock patches, followed by all the DI patches, then the Pitch patches, etc.
- > These patches are doubled in the same order in user locations 1-35 and 36-70.

Note 2 In order to get as much usable information as possible into a 6-character display, I've named every patch using the following conventions:

First two letters: amp model; CH for Champ, TD for Tweed Deluxe, BA for Tweed Bassman, DI for Direct, etc.

Next 2-3 letters: main effect used; DEL for Delay, REV for Reverb, 8D for Octave Down, 8U for Octave up, MXF for MX Flanger, etc.

The name ends with W when the WAH effect can be used.

Some names just give you the essence of the patch, e.g. "TuffSI" means a tough slide guitar sound, "Plate" means a plate reverb.

Sorry that the patch names are in effect coded--it ain't easy to get a lot of info into 6 characters.

Note 3 Make SURE to work the pedal for every sound to see what it does.

Note 4 I recommend that you set the pedal (using procedures described in the manual) to ensure that the Wah does NOT engage unless you really want it to.

A trigger level in the neighborhood of 111-115 will probably do the job.

Note 5 In general, pushing the pedal down makes the effects more intense.

Note 6 Be sure to try the A/B switch on every patch.
